

雲海 Unkai Tearoom

Unkai is a tearoom built in the sukuiya style, rich with the traditional beauty of Japanese architecture and fragrant with the relaxing scent of wood. From tea ceremonies and flower arranging to Japanese poetry, this space is used to pass on Japanese culture to modern generations.

The hiroma (grand room) as seen from the yorituki (antechamber), showcasing the spacious connecting rooms.

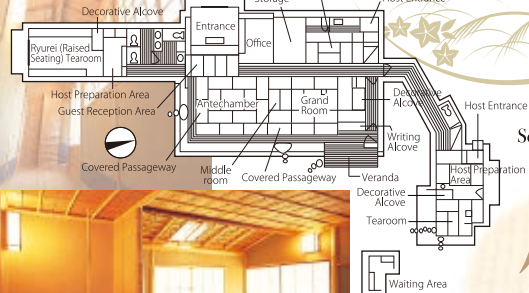

Steppingstones leading from the grand room's garden to the veranda and covered passageway.

The hirikawa (covered passageway), looking out onto the green of the garden, and bathed in natural light.

Tea Room Layout

静月庵

Seigetsu-an is a small tearoom, five and a half tatami mats in size. It has the timeless aura of a rustic thatched teahouse. Step out of the ordinary and enjoy an authentic Japanese tea ceremony, as your host diligently attends to you.

The roji (entrance garden) as glimpsed through the open guest entrances. The nijiri-guchi on the left is entered by crawling, while the kinin-guchi on the right is entered standing up.
